Some Figures.

Cotton at six cents makes things look a little blue. If the people did not owe anything it would make but little difference, but that price for cotton does not go far towards paying debts.

It is well, however, to take occasionally a balance sheet and see just how you stand. It helps in laying plans for the future and in applying the resources you have on hand. The cotton receipts at Newberry last year were about 17,000 bales-the total crop for the County, we suppose, was about 30,000 bales. The present crop is said to be short

But say that the crop will reach 25,000 bales and that the receipts at Newberry will reach 15,000 bales. That would give us at present prices about $750,000 for the County and $450,000 for New-Now what have we got to pay with this money. The amount due the bank by the farmers is about $350,000 and to the merchants for groceries and dry goods is about $175,000, making a total of $525,000. These figures are not accurate, but they are approximately correct. Another item of indebtedness that is not included in the above is the guano, which amounts in round numbers to $50,000, which makes the total $575,000 dure here in the own of Newberry, and it does not include many items.

To pay this there will be sold here say 15,000 bales of cotton at $30 a bala, which only realizes $450,000.

But then we must remember there are some other sources of revenue to the farmers, such as butter, eggs and chickens for all of which they realize considerable money. The farmers, too, this year have made in nearly every case enough corn to run them, and until this is done every year times will never get better in this coun-

These figures should demonstrate one thing, that we are mutually dependent one upon the other. The farmer and the man who lives in the country needs the merchant and the bank, and they in turn need the farmer.

Let us then cease this warfare on one another and go to work to help each other and thereby help ourselves-Newberry Herald.

A Felon's Stripes.

A dream, a midnight fancy of a sleeping mind, Melvin Bellah says sent him to the chaingang for ten years. He sat in the corner of cell No. 6 and told the story to a Constitution reporter, who stood in the corridor of the station house and listened to the man's weird relation.

It was a strange story, so strange, indeed, as to sound like a fish story. As the man spoke of the crime of which he was charged, of the wife and children he had left behind him, of the home he had the chaingang expression of his face ed could not be seen in the flickering gas-Bellah married the daughter of Mrs. Mary Fuller, a wealthy widow, who resided a half mile from his home.

Two weeks ago to-night some one went to Mrs. Fuller's home where she lived alone and unprotected, and entering her bedroom strangled her with a pillow, and after attempting to outrage her person left her for dead. After an hour or so she recovered and crawled to a neighbor-

About 1 o'clock in the morning Bellah her son-in-law, went to the place, and made a search of the house, but found her gone. He then went to ... e negro house, where he found her. He said that he had been awakened by a horrible dream concerning her. He had dreamed that some one was murdering her and springing up in a fright he hurried to the house to see if she was al-

Mr. Fuller accused Bellah of the act. saying that he did it to gain possession of her property, which would fall to her daughter, Mrs. Bellah, at her death. Bellah was arrested and lodged in jail. The affair created intense excitement on acount of the prominent standing of the parties.

Bellah was tried Saturday before Judge McWhorter at Madison. He was ably represented by W. R. Mustin. The principal witness against him was Mrs. Fulton, his mother-in-law. He was convicted and given ten years. Bellah steadfastly maintained his innocence. Through the whole matter his wife remained faithful. She believed her husband innocent and did all she could to have him acquitted. When her husband was finally convicted the blow was a powerful one to her. In speaking of his in tranquil summer mood, and the sky is wife and only child last night Bellah's voice became tremulous.

To-day he will be carried to the Chattahoochee Brick Company's camp by young Gus Starnes, who brought him up from Madison yesterday afternoon.

"Yes, indeed, I mean just that, I have no ambition to be a benefactor to the general public. And I don't know, by the way, that I have any special kindly feeling to the two or three women I spoke of. It isn't for the sake of my affection toward them I'm earning their blessing now."

"Well, for gracious goodness! how are you earning it?"

"Why, I'm training my three sons t sew on their own buttons! They are beginning to do it of their own accord. They don't follow me about the house now, with a coat in one hand and a button in the other. They go and get a needle and thread and sew the button on. They've found out it saves times and strength and words."

"It seems cruel to make boys sew on their own outtons."

"Cruel? It's kind! Those boys won't always have me to sew on buttons for however, generally the prevailing tint them. They would be badly off, indeed, if they had to do it some time, and didn't blood is thick and sluggish; if your appetite is capricious and uncertain, you to do such things for themselves. The Silence of the Plains. We speak of darkness which can be felt. Similarly we may speak of silence which can be heard, and this is another impressive element of an experience of the plains. On the sea, except in calm. and in the forest and among the places of human habitation, there is always sound, even at night; but on the treeless plains, in the midst of normal activity, there is silence as of the grave. Even a hurricane is comparatively inaudible, for there are no waters to dash, no forests to roar, no surfaces to resound, while the short grasses give forth no perceptible rustle; and there is something awful in the titanic rush of contending natural forces which you can feel, but can not see or hear. The wind may sweep away your breath on a current of sixty mile an hour, and the clouds may rush through the sky as in a tornado, but no sounds confound the ear. A winter blizzard, which carries on its frigid breath destruction to life, which blinds the eyes. and which drives the particles of ice and snow with cutting force against the frozen cheek and through all but the heaviest fur clothing, is comparatively inaud ible, and the traveler appears to himself to struggle vainly with an implacable ghostly force which fills the whole creation. When, also, nature is undisturbed blue and flecked with fleecy clouds floating far aloft, all sound seems to have died out of the world, and a mantle of silence enfolds everything. Partaking of the predominant natural sentiment, man becomes silent also; he ceases to talk to his mates and becomes moody and taciturn. The merry song of the yovager. re-echoing between wooded shores, the shout, the joke of the cheerful traveler here are stilled-stifled you might almost say-by the immeasurable muffle of si lence. Here are no woods to give back the answering shout, and the crack of the even the rare thunder breaks impotently on the continent of silence. - A Souix Falls, S. D., special says There is a big surprise in store for T Mordeceai, a member of the 'colony.' Mr. Mordeceai came to this city three months ago. He rented a fine house and installed his three maiden sisters. When Mordeceai arrived he gave it out that he was a widower from Charleston, S. C. About two weeks ago he began suit for divorce claiming desertion. Friday he left for a week at Chicago. Saturday there arrived a fine-looking woman about forty years old, who announced herself as Mrs. Mordeceal, and, notwithstanding the expostu-lations of the three sisters, took posses-sion of and installed herself as mistress in the house, thus refuting the charge of desertion. The lady is very communi-cative, and told a reporter that her husband was worth a quarter of a million was a leading lawyer of South Carolina and deserted her a year ago. She did not know where he was until recently. This promises to be one of the most interesting and bitterly contested cases tried in the

- The wildest sensation has been caus ed in the social contingent of Vienna, owing to a duel fought between the great and all powerful Princess Pauline Metternich and the Countess Kilmannsegg, the wife of the Strathalter of Lower Austria. A misunderstanding occurred between them over the management of the Musical Exhibition at Vienna, a both ladies have been the means of its success. The dispute became so serious that it was decided to be settled in mortal combat. The ladies travelled to Vadug, the capital of the little principality of Licktenstein, on the Swiss frontier, the town which Prince Alois, of Lichtenstein, some time ago offered to the Pope as a city of refuge in the event of his being obliged to leave the Vatican. The duel was fought with rapiers. At the third round the Princess was slightly wounded on the nose and the Countess on the arm. Thereupon the two seconds, Princess Schwarzenberg and ountess Kinsky, advised them to emrace, kiss and make friends, which acordingly they did. Their wounds were attended to by Baroness Lubinska, a Polish lady, who has studied medicine and obtained a doctor's degree, whom they had prudently sent from Warsaw to attend the duel.

A LONG FELT WANT!

A FTER FIVE YEARS of patient and persevering endeavor I have at last succeeded in getting control of the best hand made copper distilled Whiskey in the world. This Whiskey has been tested by the United States Chemist at Washington, D. C., and declared to be perfectly free from all poisonous chemicals generally present in the distillation of all Whiskeys commonly used in the United States. It is entirely free from the maddening effect, the nauseating of the stomach, and the immediate intoxication that is always the result of the use of an inferior article. It is pleasant to the palate, her not that hurning effect so common in other goods. has not that burning effect so common in other goods. It is strengthening, invigora-ting and mild, giving the bouyancy of youth to old age. It is stimulating to the overting and mild, giving the bouyancy of youth to did age. It is stimulating to the over-worked and feeble; in cases of consumption, heavy colds, weak lungs, debility and loss of appetite it is quickly recommended by the leading doctors and bospital physicians in the United States, and no sick room should be without it All enfeebled, weak, old and infirm should take it daily as directed, and thereby regain that bouancy and strength that countless thousands stand so much in need of.
